Share your Shutdown Story

Have you or your institution been affected by the government shutdown? APSA members are invited to share their personal stories of how lapses in federal funding and other changes to federal agencies are adversely impacting the research community. Contributions may be used to help share real-world, timely information with policymakers (e.g., Congress and federal agencies) about the impact these actions are having across the country. Your responses will remain confidential, and any stories used will be anonymized and used anecdotally. You may also submit your story anonymously.

To share your story, visit this website or send to this email. This initiative is led by the Consortium of Social Science Associations (COSSA). APSA is a founding member and governing member of COSSA.

Resource: What is a Government Shutdown?

APSA is inviting folks to take advantage of a new advocacy resource from COSSA, A Crash Course on the Federal Government. Through this series COSSA provides easy-to-understand information about the inner workings of the federal government and how they affect social and behavioral science research. The series begins with a brief on “What is a Government Shutdown?”
